

Dear FCC:

I hate the idea of someone reading my email. We have already encountered someone reading our private pm's on the main SaveFarScape.com bboard and found it to be an unnerving experience. If we were to use the system we had to constantly watch what we said to eachother even when it had to be said. It stopped all communication until we took care of the problem. It was horrifying to be spied on! I already know first hand that someone reading my private comments or those made to me in return stifles communication.

Anyone! Spying on our private communications oppresses our freedom of speech, certainly our privacy and our civil rights. Any way you look at it, reading other people's mail is a bad idea.

My comment is let communication stay private and spy-free. There are tried and true ways to catch the bad guys. Reading his or her mail is the lazy man's way and assumes that no one cracks a joke.

Truly,
Nancy Bovela
